- 1. This park has the same name as well-known Irish town in Massachusetts. There is even a town with the name in England.
Softballs soar, and basketballs spin, But I'm hiding where the fun begins. I'm hidden high, where kids love to fly.
- 2. Can you find me? The name is opposite of south, if you know where I am then you know that Norwood is right.
In a park where laughter soars and sings,
Where children chase the joy that summer brings,
Amongst the slides—eight shining in their might—
A secret waits, concealed from common sight.
Six courts of pickleball, where rivals play,
Their paddles clack like whispers in the day.
But nestled 'neath the willow's gentle sway,
A rocking boat hides magic on display.
- 3. Have you heard of Myrtle? Has two friends that meet in the middle. One's name is Archie the other's name is Maxwell. All three of these friends like to say they are from Cliffwood.
In a park where the children laugh and play,
A wee little fellow is hiding away.
With a coat of bright green and a twinkle in eye,
He guards all his gold, oh so sly!
On a bench made of wood where the sun likes to shine,
Look closely, my friend, for a clue that's divine.
He's small and quite cheeky, with a laugh like a song,
Find him and treasure will soon come along!

4. They call this a field. It's located in a beach, but it doesn't look like a beach. That's a riddle all in itself.

In winter's chill, where laughter flows, On snowy hills, the cold wind blows. Near cement stairs, where children glide, a tiny trickster likes to hide. With a pot of gold, he's sly and spry. Can you guess where this wee one might lie? Search for the spot where sleds take flight. Find me, hidden from sight!

5. There is a theme park that has a similar name to mine. You need to remove the book to get this hook.

I'm small and green, a mischievous sprite,
Hidden in a large park, a colorful sight.
You'll cross the spider swing, the climbing net too,
Before finding me, nestled where kids play and coo.
I'm under something slippery.
Where you stand to watch the fun, can you find where I hide?

6. Across from this park is a body of water. Now don't start a riot, but back in the day they say there were pirates who took pleasure in burying their treasure.

In the park, I'm hidden away,
Behind a house where people go each day.
Not a residence, but a place to rest,
Where nature calls, I'm at my best.

7. There's a water tower here, if I climb on top I can overlook the bay.

I'm hidden behind a tall, light blue friend,
In a small park, where games transcend.
Past the laughter, the joy, the fun, a tiny chap, my hiding's begun

8. How many clovers do you think we'd find if we rolled over in that outfield next to mine? I wish we could ask Richie for a hotdog. Can you figure out which park I chose to embark on next?

I'm hidden in a verdant space, Near clover fields, a tiny place.
A playground's slide, my up-and-down,
A bench nearby, where I've been known to frown.
Though small I am, my treasure's grand,
Finding me requires a clever hand.
The park is small, the clues are few, but if you can master the slide, you can master the view.

9. To crack this code, you really must know the roads. If you are a townie you should know that there's a road named County. Here's some mercy as I know it's off of Jersey.

In the park's heart, I'm not to be found,
But on the outskirts, my home's renowned.
A gazebo's shade, is where I take rest,
With me treasure, I'm forever blessed.

10. When you visit this park you may have to listen as you may hear some of the deer. Although they may fear you remember they like to appear near the edge of the field.

In Deerfield Park, where kids love to play,
I'm hiding behind something that's thrown away.
